

WEBINAR: Next steps for starting out in consulting

Building on the recent 'Starting out in consulting' webinar, this webinar will focus on the next critical steps for a successful transition into the world of consulting.

When you are first starting out as a consultant there are many unknowns. A lot can be learned from other consultants about how to take the first steps and the pitfalls to look out for.

This webinar will provide insights into the way two experienced livestock consultants got into consulting and how they subsequently steered their way through the unknowns.

The webinar will be presented by Andrew Whale and Elise Bowen.

Andrew Whale (Livestock Logic) is a veterinarian who predominantly works as a sheep consultant with producers in Victoria, South Australia and New South Wales. Andrew focuses on a number of areas with clients, utilising his skills in animal health, nutrition, financial benchmarking and animal management to improve whole farm performance and profitability.

Elise Bowen (Sheep Data Management) grew up on a family sheep farm in York, WA. After graduating from Murdoch University with a bachelor of animal science, she worked with the Murdoch/DAFWA sheep team on national sheep research projects. In 2014 she established her own business, Sheep Data Management. Elise is now based in Griffith in the Riverina region of NSW, however her business services sheep producers around the country.

Webinar hosted via Zoom – click here to register

Wednesday 1 June 4–5 pm (AEST)

The recording will be available on the Livestock Advisor Updates link on the MLA website after the event.

For more information, contact Jo Jones, Livestock Advisor Updates coordinator:
livestockadvisorupdates@pinionadvisory.com

Visit the Livestock Advisor Updates webpage at www.mla.com.au/advisor-updates
Stay up to date by following us on Twitter @livestockadvise